

Another Warm CPI Report Likely to Alter Fed Outlook

Although consumer inflation moderated a bit in February, this morning's CPI numbers were warmer than expected for the second straight month. With the March FOMC meeting now just a week away, Fed officials are likely to raise their inflation outlook and perhaps revise their dot plot to indicate fewer rate cuts this year.

Scott McIntyre

The headline consumer price index climbed +0.4%, up from +0.3% in January and matching the median forecast. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS), shelter costs and gasoline drove the increase, combining to account for over 60% of the February gain. On a year-over-year basis, overall CPI rose from +3.1% to +3.2%.

Read the full article

Read more Economic Commentary