

Brisk Growth Pushes Consumer Prices Higher

So far, investors agree with Fed officials that inflationary pressure will be short-lived, but hotter-than-expected prices have introduced some creeping doubt. The headline consumer price index rose +0.6% in May while core CPI climbed +0.7%. Both readings were slightly above forecast, but slightly below April increases.

Scott McIntyre

Download the full article

Read more Economic Commentary