

Housing Cools in February

A rise in mortgage lending rates paired with extreme winter weather conditions combined to curb overall home sales during the month of February, although the housing sector had already begun showing signs of moderation following the strongest sales year since 2006.

Scott McIntyre

Download the full article

Read more Economic Commentary