

Mild PPI Report Rekindles Bond Rally

The monthly measure of wholesale prices in the U.S. was unexpectedly negative in May, reversing an increase the previous month and adding a dose of fuel to yesterday's bond rally. The headline producer prices index (PPI) fell -0.2% last month, the biggest drop since last October. The May reading was below the +0.1% median forecast and much cooler than the +0.5% advance in April. When food, energy and trade are excluded, producer prices were unchanged last month, the mildest measure in 12 months.

Scott McIntyre

Read the full article

Read more Economic Commentary